

Provisional Prosthesis for Class I Radical Mandibular Alvelectomy Patient - A Case Report

Paras Vohra¹ and Neha Vohra²

¹Department of Prosthodontics, ²Department of Conservative Dentistry & Endodontics, Saraswati Dental College & Hospital, Lucknow, India

Abstract: Prosthetic management of surgical defects has always been a big challenge for a prosthodontist. The sudden change in patient's perspective towards life affects the future outcome of any prosthetic rehabilitation. A good prosthesis can bring back the lost pride and smile on the patient face. A through understanding of post surgical anatomy and physiology is a prerequisite for the development of successful prosthesis. This article briefly covers the various anatomical and physiological factors towards successful prosthetic management of mandibular alvelectomy patient.

Keywords: Radical alvelectomy, Provisional prosthesis

Address for Correspondence:

Dr Paras Vohra

41 Mall Avenue,

Lucknow-226001, India

Contact No: +919935513333

E-mail: drparasvohra@gmail.com

How to cite: Vohra P, Vohra N. Provisional prosthesis for class I radical mandibular alvelectomy patient - A case report. AJOHAS 2011; 1(1): 35-39.
